

REBELLION AND REMEMBRANCE IN MODERN IRELAND

Laurence M. Geary, editor

Contents

Preface	7
Introduction	9
I REBELLION
James S. Donnelly, Jr Sectarianism in 1798 and in Catholic nationalist memory	16
Ruán O'Donnell Foreign enemies and internal rebels: the French War and the United Irishmen in New South Wales	38
Gary Owens Popular mobilisation and the rising of 1848: the clubs of the Irish Confederation	51
Brigitte Anton 'The Irish password is no longer repeal, but revolution': a German view of Ireland's '48	64
II REMEMBRANCE
Tadhg O'Sullivan 'The violence of a servile war': three narratives of Irish rural insurgency post-1798	73
Tom Dunne 'Tá Gaedhil bhocht cráidhte': memory, tradition and the politics of the poor in Gaelic poetry and song	93
Maura Cronin Memory, story and balladry: 1798 and its place in popular memory in pre-Famine Ireland	112
Seán Ryder Young Ireland and the 1798 Rebellion	135
III REPRESENTATION
Robert Mahony 'New light' Ulster Presbyterianism and the nationalist rhetoric of John Mitchel	148
Neil McCam Voicing rebellion in Victorian fiction: towards a textual commemoration	159
Sophie Ollivier Presence and absence of Wolfe Tone during the centenary commemoration of the 1798 rebellion	175

Orlaith Mannion 'Silent but eloquent reminders': the nationalist monuments in Cork and Skibbereen	185
Jonathan M. Wooding A monument 'where pilgrims may worship and patriotism be renewed': the sacral nationalism of the Australian '98 centenary	196
Kevin Rockett Representations of Irish history in fiction films made prior to the 1916 rising	214