

IRELAND AND EUROPE IN THE NINETEENTH CENTURY

Leon Litvack and Colin Graham, editors

Contents

Colin Graham and Leon Litvack Introduction	11
Alan O'Day Ireland and Europe: theoretical perspectives	16
Siobhán Kilfeather Ireland and Europe in 1825: situating the Banims	29
Arthur Broomfield French connections in Maria Edgeworth's Ormond	51
Jason King 'Raparees' or 'refugees'? The normative image of involuntary displacement in nineteenth-century Irish literature	61
Matthew Potter William Monsell: a Roman Catholic Francophile Anglo-Irishman	77
Paddy Lyons Ireland, Britain, and mass literacy in nineteenth-century Europe	89
Andreas Hüther A transnational nation-building process: philologists and universities in nineteenth-century Ireland and Germany	101
Gary K. Peatling Saxon and Celt on the Rhine? Race, religion and representation in Irish reactions to the Franco-Prussian War, 1870-1	112
Leon Litvack Continental art and the 'Cockneyfied Corkonian': German and French influences on Daniel Maclise	122
Patrick Maume Fenianism as a global phenomenon: Thomas O'Malley Baines, papal soldier and Fenian convict	148
Mary Burke Mad Irish fiddlers in Paris: music and wandering musicians in Irish Revival writing	160
Mary S. Pierse European influences and the novels of George Moore: reciprocal artistic impressions	173
Lucy McDiarmid Irish men and French food	186
Asier Altuna-García de Salazar Alicia Le Fanu's Don Juan de las Sierras, or, El Empecinado (1823): appropriations of Spain in Irish romanticism	199